Palantir gets $10 billion contract from U.S. Army
The award covering the next decade is one of the largest DoD contracts ever, cementing the tech firm's role in warfighting for years to come.
July 31, 2025 at 6:13 p.m. EDT

PALANTIR JUST TOOK OVER THE U.S. GOVERNMENT

ONE COMPANY. ONE SYSTEM. TOTAL SURVEILLANCE.

They just signed a $10B Army contract, one of DoD's biggest ever. Its AI already runs through 30+ federal agencies, from the FBI to ICE to HHS. It powers battlefield ops, police departments, immigration control, pandemic modeling and now, the Army's entire digital infrastructure. Its founder called it "the operating system for government."

Every piece of your life, your location, health, purchases, social media, all fed into one AI system designed to track you, profile you, and predict your next move. Not for your safety. For their control.

The government being put under control by a privately owned company makes perfect sense once you realize that the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA is a privately owned corporation owned by the Bank of England. It has been a such since 1871 when the Act of 1871 was passed which redefined the former country as such (through a few small but extremely significant alteration to the constitution.) This was followed by establishment of a privately owned government for this corporation, the Federal Reserve and its board, in 1913. Since then that has been your true government puppeteering and manipulating the theatrical feux-democratic governance.

In that light, the "government" contracting a private company to install AI throughout its departments and agencies makes perfect sense. The owners are installing AI to tighten control and monitoring of the massive and perilous theater production of republic and democracy they've been running for over a century.